

MyGolfSpy Ranks Tour Edge HL3 Iron-Wood #1 Most Forgiving Super Game Improvement Iron Set in 2019 Most Wanted Testing

MyGolfSpy has named the Tour Edge HL3 Iron-Wood set the Most Forgiving Super Game Improvement iron set in their 2019 Most Wanted testing.

The popular website that bills itself 'Truth Digest' tested 10 different super game improvement iron sets for over 120 hours with over 6,000 shots analyzed to name the best of the best in super game improvement irons for 2019.

Their in-depth tests utilizing hundreds of thousands of data points led them to name the HL3 Iron-Wood the most forgiving in the super game improvement iron set category.

They said the following about the hollow-body set designed by Tour Edge Master Club designer David Glod:

- "Exceptional Ball Speed Consistency"
- "Extremely tight shot consistency at the mid and long iron distances"
- "If you're looking for forgiveness – the Tour Edge HL3 Iron-Woods impressed us with its consistency across several key metrics"
- "Testers in the slower swing speed category tended to favor clubs that helped the ball get up in the air. Clubs like the Tour Edge HL3 Iron-Woods were among the top-rated for slower swing speed golfers"

"This is a great award from MyGolfSpy as we believe that the most important factor in super game improvement irons is forgiveness and staying in the fairway," said Glod. "This hollow-body design creates a higher launch that will help slower swing speeds get the ball in the air with ease. The forgiveness and ease-of-use of Hot Launch iron-woods have revolutionized the game for hundreds of thousands of golfers."

In the test, the HL3 Iron-Wood long irons rated tied for 1st in strokes gained with a 42% performance rating, while the short irons rated tied for 3rd in strokes gained with a 50% performance rating. MyGolfSpy deems the strokes gained metric as one of the most important in how a golf club fits a particular golfer.
